

Beechat develops next-generation secure communication systems built on a fully decentralised architecture. Our radios use native cryptographic addressing with no central servers, combining open firmware, tamper detection, and modular hardware to ensure resilient, infrastructure-free communication. We enable trusted connectivity where conventional mesh systems depend on control points or external networks.